Dear Mr. President,

We are writing as American nonprofit organizations to thank you for the comments in your Cairo speech that recognized the problems current rules for charitable giving create for American Muslims, and for your commitment to correct the situation. We are seeking a meeting with you and the appropriate representatives of your administration to provide background information on how current national security rules create problems for all U.S. charities and to provide recommendations for change.

Our network is a broad based effort of faith-based charities, including Muslim organizations, grantmaking foundations, humanitarian aid and development groups and civil liberties advocates. We have joined forces to promote sensible long-term solutions to problems created by the continuation of emergency measures that are ill-suited in the charitable context.

It is our hope that U.S. rules can be brought into alignment with the State Department's December 2006 Guiding Principles on Non-Governmental Organizations, which recognize that NGOs "are essential to the development and success of free societies and that they play a vital role in ensuring accountable, democratic government."

We believe the roots of terrorism are complex, involving the hopelessness of poverty, anger at injustice, and frustration at being shut out of the political process. To reduce the influence of these factors, U.S. charities are striving to meet basic needs, provide opportunities and engage with people in peaceful political participation. But national security regulatory and policy barriers have restricted such efforts.

For example, the Department of the Treasury has refused all attempts to release frozen charitable funds, which includes zakat donations, for humanitarian purposes. It has also resisted calls to withdraw its problematic guidelines for U.S. organizations, despite consistent and widespread criticism from foundations and charities. This is counterproductive to the goals of the U.S. charitable community and national security policy.

We are confident that new approaches that reflect the mission and expertise of the U.S. charitable community are not only possible, but essential to the success of your national security and public diplomacy strategies. We formed this network to work toward that goal. Such changes would benefit U.S. organizations, our international NGO partners and the people we serve around the world.

To succeed we believe new rules governing charitable giving and operations must address systemic problems in order to achieve the following benchmarks:

- Provide clear standards for permissible charitable and development activity that are consistent with long-standing norms for humanitarian operations, such as the Code of Conduct for the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) in Disaster Relief.
- Provide a fair opportunity for charities accused of supporting terrorism to defend themselves.
- Protect charitable assets from indefinite freezing and allow these resources to further the charitable mission donors intended to support.
- Withdraw the Treasury Department's Anti-Terrorist Financing Guidelines: Voluntary Best Practices for U.S.-based Charities.

We look forward to working with you toward the common goal of protecting the work of American charities and the intent of their donors. We can be contacted through Kay Guinane, Charity and Security Network Program Manager at kguinane@charityandsecurity.org or at the address above.

Yours truly,
